

goLOCAL VANCOUVER
FIND LOCAL BUSINESSES

Site Index

- News
- Opinion
- Letters
- Health
- Garden
- Travel
- Community Briefs
- History's Lens
- Arts & Entertainment
- Dining
- Rest Guide
- Community Calendar
- Contests
- Contact Us
- About Us
- Classifieds
- Back Issues
- Traffic cameras
- Healthwise
- Live Green

Vannet Sites

- Career Education
- Astral Reflections
- Movie Listings

Community Links

- Arts and Entertainment
- Opera Pro Cantanti
  - Vancouver Asian Film Festival
  - Green Thumb Theatre

Business

- Kitsilano Chamber of Commerce
- Wired woman
- Wet Coast Women

Charities/Non-Profit Groups

- explorASIAN
- West Coast Women's Legal Education & Action Fund
- Necessary Voices Society

More links

Classifieds

- Marketplace
- Find a job at working.com
  - Find a car at driving.ca
  - Find an apartment at househunting.ca

Parks commissioners defend Charter amendment

Proposed change will give parks board more power over signs, advertising

Sandra Thomas, Vancouver Courier
Published: Wednesday, January 21, 2009

NPA parks board commissioner Ian Robertson denies a proposed amendment to the Vancouver Charter on signs and advertising in city parks and community centres would translate into increased corporate presence.

"This whole thing has been blown out of proportion," Robertson told the Courier. "It's not about allowing more advertising, but about tightening up policy around advertising."

At a parks board meeting Monday night, the board deferred a proposed amendment to the Charter which would give commissioners more power to regulate signs and advertising in parks but also relax regulations during special events, such as the 2010 Olympic Games.

The parks board mulls over advertising in parks for special events, such as the 2010 Winter Olympic Games.

Photo illustration-Dan Toulgoet

Font:

In November 2006, the city approved two policies related to the naming of civic facilities, which provided guidelines to cover situations where donations are made to secure naming rights or when a name is chosen but no money is involved.

At the time, the Courier reported concern among some community centre association presidents about the new policy, particularly because six community centres will be or are undergoing redevelopment and could be open to corporate renaming. New community centres are also scheduled to be built at both Southeast False Creek and East Fraser Lands.

Green Party commissioner Stuart Mackinnon said not only was the public confused about the intent of the amendment, but so were several members of the board. "It seemed to give the impression it would allow for more signs and advertising in parks, when in fact staff explained we already have that power," said Mackinnon.

He said the spirit of the amendment was to keep more control of advertising in parks and community centres. The report has been sent back to staff for clarification. "This is time sensitive because of course it was spurred by the Olympics," said Mackinnon. "But this is not Olympic specific."

Business Solutions presented by CISCO

- Can my business survive a divorce?
- How to find revenue in an economic downturn
- Should I use a call centre?
- How can diversity help business?
- How do I make business move as stress-free a...

FINANCIAL POST

DELL

Are you a Master Multitasker?

See how Dell and Microsoft can help you be more productive - anywhere, anytime.

Windows Vista
Office Home and Student 2007

- Top News Stories
- Steinko guilty of killing Alberta family
  - Arctic to see first ice-free summer in 2015